

Inter-Library-Loan via Oria from external libraries

All libraries that are registered in the database Base Bibliotek maintained by the National Library of Norway, has the possibility to request inter-library-loans from libraries within the BIBSYS Consortia.

This is done via the online opac: oria.no

As long as you are on an IP-adress that does not belong to any institution in the BIBSYS Consortia you will get a splash-screen (in Norwegian) that informs you that we did not recognized your IP and that you should select a local instance of Oria or the generic one.

The screenshot shows the oria.no splash screen. At the top left is the logo "oria.no" in orange. Below it is the text "Du befinner deg på en IP-adresse som ikke tilhører noen av institusjonene som benytter Oria." A red oval highlights a drop-down menu labeled "Velg institusjon". To the right of this menu is a callout box with the text "Use drop-down to select a local instance of Oria". Below the menu is a checkbox labeled "Kryss av hvis du ikke vil at denne meldingen skal vises igjen!". At the bottom left is a blue link "Klikk her for å søke i Oria uten å velge institusjon". To the right of this link is another callout box with the text "Used this link to use the generic instance of Oria". At the bottom left is the "BIBSYS" logo.

In the current implementation you have to log on to the instance of Oria that belongs to the institution you want to request the document from. E.g. If you would like to send the request to the University of Oslo you need to log on to the Oria-instance that belongs to the University of Oslo.

You can use the generic instance of Oria to locate which institutions that owns a specific document. You find links to the local instances from the drop-down-list on the front page of the generic instance.

What is Oria
